Drar Sir: I have just received a letter from you, deted the gib.
""Your medicine is getting a great name in I linois, and I think it will not be a great while before it will be the only Asue medicine used. The doctors are becoming very much opposed to it, but the only fault they can find with it is its not containing arsenic or quinine, which they say all Agree medicines must contain to be good; and they can find a good many people that they can make believe as they do.
I am cathident that such men will soon lose the most profitable part of their practice in proportion as the virtue of year medicine becomes more generally known.

With much respect, yours,

Between 500 and 500 pages. # 4 50.

On account of the immense orders the publication of THE MATCH GREL:

will be delayed for a few days, in order to prepare a large ed than to supply orders simultant-unity.

A destinguisted critic who examined the manuscript of this powerful book says:

'It is a work of remarkable power and interest, abounding in passess of a xquisito beauty and pathos, evidently written by a passon of fine taste and pressessing a high degree of talents.

The volume is evidently destined to create a marked sensettlen as the characters are all dawn from real life most of them new living and some at the present time occupying a large same of public stression; while the style is at once beautiful and chaste, and the language pure and classic. The conviction on reacting a few propes is instantly formed that the author wheles a per which fairly glows with senior.

TOWER LEMENTS OF GRAMMAR. The favor with which this little book has been received by the public, and the success with which it has been used in schools which the young scholar invariably experiences on his first in duction into the study of Orammar. It begins at the lowest prehensive plan of instruction. It teaches" one thing at a time, difficult philosophy of our language; it is always a favorite in

It is for Grammar what 'Colburn's First Lewone' is for Arithmetic; it makes the principles clear wit out burdet in the mind with the technics. I know of no work so well adapted for those beginning the study of Grammar. You have done a valuable service to the young in the preparation of it; and I am confident that you will find a rich reward in the viction that you have made the study of Grammar, which has the comprehension of the child, as well as attractive and

I rejoice at every such successful effort as this in the cause " Aug. 17, 1854."

From The North American Review. "Our schools suffer no imposition so egregious as in the cumbrons grammatical text-books in common use. They serve no earthly purpose, except to overtask the verbal memory, and to obscure the mental perception of the pupil. The Grammar before us is an honorable exception. Its definitions are as ple as language can make them, and are in every instance illustrated by examples carefully analyzed. Its rales of syntax are few, concise and comprehensive. It contains no irrelevant mat ter, and could be studied with interest and profit by an intell! gent pupil of seven or eight years of age."

From the Rev. S. Saltz arch. " CANTON, N. H., July 20, 1855. "DEAR SIR: I have to acknowledge the receipt of a copy of your ELEMENTS OF GRAMMAR. The excelence of your little book having been suggested to me some months since. I procured a copy for examination, and being satisfied of its worth we are other Grammar for beginners with which I am as trust the time is neer when it shall displace in the hands of the younger scholars the books which now serve mainly to be wilder found the young mind.
